Following publication of the original article [1], the authors identified a typographical error in the 1st sentence of the 3rd paragraph under the heading ‘Moving towards comprehensive collaborative foresight by incorporating anticipation’ and a missing author name in references 7 and 30.

The sentence amended as follows with new reference added:

‘This rising awareness that foresight practitioners and futures studies scholars can be more effective when they conceptualize their work as deployments of so-called anticipatory systems (cf. COST Action 22 [11]) is coupled with a rising interest in understanding and fostering the capability of FL (cf. Miller).’

Reference 11 added as follows:

Reference 7 amended as follows:

Reference 30 amended as follows:

The original article [1] has been updated.
